

WORK PLAN

Context: primary and secondary education, class

Key-words: individual and open learning methods, inclusive setting

Description:

Using work plans is a way of self-directed learning. This method developed from the ideas of the progressive educators Freinet , Petersen and Parkhurst (Dalton-Plan).

Pupils decide themselves, when, with whom and where the tasks will be done. You can use work plans for highly efficient differentiation according to the abilities of the pupils.

You may create work plans for different periods: day, week, month or the duration of the project.

The work plan is an instrument of differentiation for the teacher and an instrument of planning for the pupil.

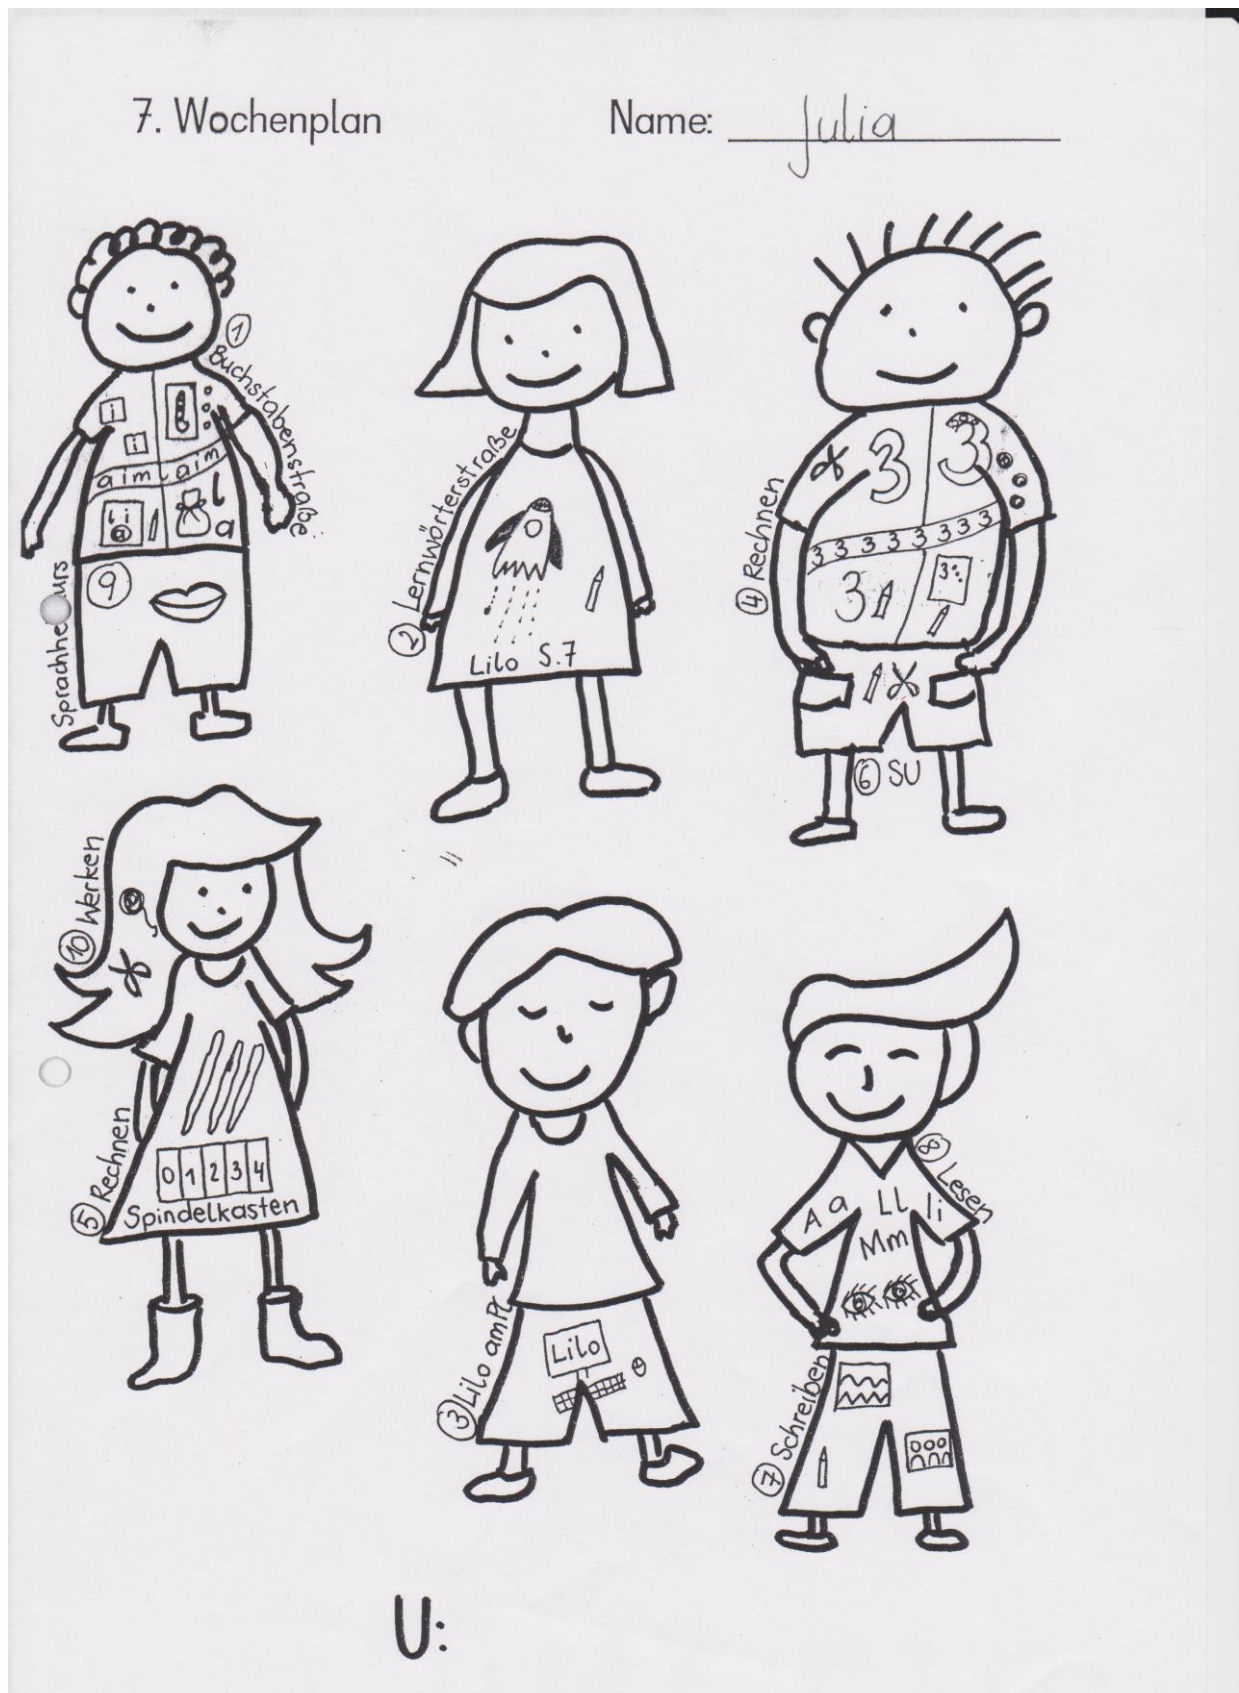

It may content compulsory tasks, optional topics and/or individually chosen topics.

Conclusion

The work plan may promote the pupil's autonomy, self-activity, methodical expertise and social skills.
